World Briefing | Europe: Russia: 2 Adventurers Held After Ice Trek

By C. J. CHIVERS (NYT)
Published: April 5, 2006

An American and a British citizen were detained by Russian authorities after walking across the ice on the Bering Strait and making landfall on Russia's Far East coast, Russian officials said. The men were completing one of the more difficult legs of a round-the-world walk by the Briton, Karl Bushby, above, and failed to register with the Russian authorities after coming ashore. The American citizen was identified as Dimitri Kieffer, 40, of Anchorage, Alaska. They also had a Colt magnum pistol and a global positioning system, the authorities said. Russian officials, speaking by telephone, said the men were in the village of Uelen and were being investigated. Mr. Bushby, 36, is halfway through a 12-year, 36,000-mile walk from South America to Britain, according to his Web site, goliath.mail2web.com. C. J. CHIVERS (NYT)
